New $12 million medical center

Valley Memorial near settlement on site

The Valley Memorial Hospital (VMH) Board of Directors announced that "a settlement is close at hand" for purchase of 23 acres of land off Santa Rita Road in Pleasanton for a medical center.

The proposed $12 million medical center has been stalled in litagation since VMH filed a lawsuit in March demanding sale of the land, after hospital representatives offered the total purchase price to the sellers on Feb. 10, 1975, and were turned down.

VMH directors went into executive session on Thursday to further discuss the matter, but no details from that meeting were released.

A few "minor points" had to be changed to receive hospital approval, but further negotiations were expected to iron out remaining issues, the directors reported.

The Pleasanton Medical Center is expected to maintain a 150-bed hospital initially, with planned gradual expansion to a 350-bed service.

Completion date for the facility has been pushed back to January 1979 because of the court suit.

VMH Spokesperson Marjy Odell said a joint commission of the Alameda and Contra Costa Counties Planning Agencies is surveying the needs and types of services required in the Valley and will recommend to the VMH directors services that should be offered by each both VMH and the Pleasanton facility.

The State Division of Mines and Geology has not yet completed a seismic survey of the proposed site, and that too was delaying construction, Odell said.

A statement of revenue and expense for the month of May and year-to-date totals was released, showing that the impact of the physicians' strike was minimized due to prior planning by VMH Administrator Tom Andrews.

Andrews was congratulated by board directors for a plan he drew up in anticipation of the strike, calling for gradual reduction of employes as incoming patient numbers dropped.

During May, only 44.8 per cent of the hospital beds were occupied, as compared with an expected 71.03 per cent occupancy rate.

The occupancy rate for the year was only down slightly, however, from a budgeted 74.9 per cent to an actual 71.3 per cent.

Net revenue for May was $372,398, compared to an expected $521,784. Year-to-date totals again show only a slight drop, from a budgeted $5,794,110, to an actual $5,510,658.

The Family Health Center in San Ramon, showed its smallest loss since its inception, losing only $6,929, compared to an expected deficit of $9,357.

Actual patient visits during May at the Health Center totaled 2,019, against an expected 2,413.

Odell later announced that the Center's hours have been changed from 9 a.m.-11 p.m. seven days a week, to 9 a.m.-9 p.m. seven days a week. The change is effective today.

The directors said that the physicians' boycott had little to do with the patronage at the Family Health Center.

Andrews explained the plan by which the hospital maintained maximal operating efficiency during the strike to board members, saying: "About three to four weeks before the boycott, we called department heads together and explained the perameters of the boycott."

The depatrtment heads then formulated a plan whereby staff would be reduced as the number of patients dropped. As much as possible, employes were taking vacations so loss of pay would be minimized , Andrews said.

Directors said that the $150,000 loss suffered by the hospital during the strike was weathered only by implementation of the Andrews plan, and a letter of commendation would be sent to him and to department heads.

In other action, directors voted unanimously to join the American Hospital Association so lobbying and court fights for hospital interests could best be served. The membership will cost about $3,000 annually.

Directors then accepted a name for the new temporary quarters in which they held their meeting Thursday. The COVE (Contribution Of Voluntary Efforts) was submitted by the women's auxiliary and unanimously accepted.

County maid contest

Parade signals fair '75 start

That traditional harbinger of early summer and good times a'coming, the Alameda County Fair Parade, will christen the 63rd annual County Fair when it wends its way down Main Street-Pleasanton today at 12 noon.

With Pleasanton's own Diane Dunbar as Grand Marshal, the parade starts from Amador Valley High School, travels down Main to Rose Street and right on Rose to the Fairgrounds. Two hundred entries, ranging from equestrian and band units to novelty groups and floats, are set for the 12 o'clock stepoff.

The parade is once again being organized by the Pleasanton Jaycees.

Awards in the numerous parade categories will be presented at the Fairgrounds' Court of 4 Seasons at 6 p.m.

The second major event on today's program will be the Maid of Alameda County Contest, scheduled for the Fairgrounds Amphitheatre at 8:30 tonight. Vying for the crown worn the past year by Rhonda Sue Silveira of Fremont will be young women representing Alameda, Albany, Fremont, Hayward, Newark, San Leandro, San Lorenzo, Union City and Brenda Lee Sylva (Dublin), Terri Groshong (Livermore) and Lori Hickman (Pleasanton).

Ed Hennessy returns as master of ceremonies for the pageant, with song stylist Martin Walker and the Jack Fisher Orchestra backing the show. The new Maid of Alameda County will reign over the two-week run of the Fair and until the 1976 Fair.

The horse racing schedule debuts Monday with first post at 1:30 p.m. Off the parimutuel handle and daily crowd counts at the Solano County Fair in Vallejo, daily records in all categories appear certain to fall during the Pleasanton meeting.

Million dollar daily handles and weekday crowds in excess of 8,000 also appear certain for the programs of quarter horse and thoroughbred racing.

Today is Supervisors Day and Parade Day. The Foley and Burke Carnival will operate every day until at least 10 p.m. All exhibits and displays will close at 10 each night but the carnival midway will remain open at the discretion of Fair management.

Also on today's opening schedule at the Fairgrounds are:

12 Noon Art in Action, featuring the works of Fran Erwin, charcoal and pastel portrait sketching, and William Sala, oil and acrylic painting, in the Art Exhibit Area.

1 to 5 p.m., Egg decorating and mache decor demonstration, Mary Dee's Arts and Crafts, Home Arts Building.

2 p.m., Miss Terry's variety show, Court of 4 Seasons.

3 p.m., photo slide show at thephotography department.

4 p.m., Maggie's show time revue, Court of 4 Seasons.

7 p.m., Gates open to Amphitheatre for Maid of Alameda County Contest. Free Admission.

Murray school official to resign Monday

Murray Elementary School District Associate Superintendent William Crozier will submit his resignation Monday night at a special meeting of the MESD Board of Trustees at Fredericksen School.

The 8 p.m. meeting was originally called as solely an informational affair on the controversial $7 million MESD budget, but with Crozier's action, the board will have to consider his resignation as well.

If the budget discussion — which is set up for interested parents — does not take up the whole evening, the board will go into closed personnel session to determine what steps to take in coming up with a successor. If however, the public has a large number of questions on the budget, the board will hold its executive session Wednesday morning at 7 a.m.

However, the main business will still be disseminating information on the proposed district budget to the taxpayers. Board President Bob Foster is the only member who has publicly indicated his disapproval of the staff-prepared budget, but unhappy teachers have been annoyed with the budget since its unveiling.

Foster voted not to accept the budget at the last MESD meeting, but three other members voted to approve the document.

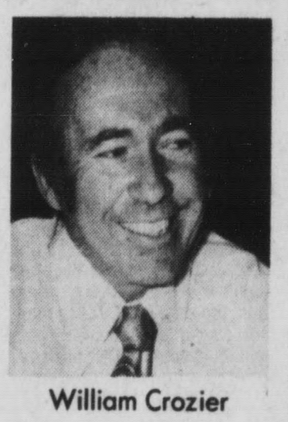
Foster promised to reveal his specific complaints at Monday's meeting.

The teachers have been unhappy with the budget all along, claiming that the district priorities are not in order. The latest counterproposal from the teachers on their contract for 1975-76 calls for relocation of $150,000 within the budget.

The teachers want the money spent on program and supplies rather than on maintenance of buildings and grounds that the district claims is necessary.

Although negotiations are at a standstill, no new meetings have been scheduled.

The teachers declared an impasse several weeks ago and called for a fact-finding committee, but the two sides cannot even agree on the procedure for fact-finding.



William Crozier

Teacher spokesmen indicated they wanted to negotiate on the fact-finding procedure but no official communications have been received by the district.

Crozier's resignation could well affect the progress of negotiations. He has been the main negotiator for the district and his departure on Monday for the San Ramon Valley Unified School District could slow down the already snail-like pace even further.

According to a reliable source, Crozier left for three main reasons — he wanted the experience of working in a unified district; he felt there were more advantages for him in a growing district and his new job will be only in personnel, an area he enjoys.

Crozier was on vacation this past week, but it is understood that his new post will be Director of Personnel for SRVUSD. His duties in MESD include personnel, but also other areas such as curriculum and instruction.

The district has several alternatives open in replacing Crozier, including simply replacing him with another Associate Superintendent, or creating a new post dealing with only personnel and dividing his other responsibilities among existing staff.

City delays council meet in Livermore

LIVERMORE - The next regular city council meeting will not be held until Tuesday night, July 8.

Council members will not meet on June 30 because it is the fifth Monday of the month and their policy is to meet on the first four Mondays of each month.

Although the next meeting would be held July 7, that date has been designated Livermore Day at the Alameda County Fair and the council decided to postpone its meeting until the next day, Tuesday, July 8.

Copies of the agenda for the next meeting, along with background material on the subjects to be discussed, should be available at the public library as of Thursday, July 3.

Career employes not in demand

Valley steak, lobster houses defend hiring policies

Third in a series

Valley restaurant managers of the steak and lobster establishments don't feel the need to defend their hiring policies against the theories of more traditional houses.

They think the old guard is wrong — point for point.

It's not a matter of interpreting one homogeneous philosophy two different ways.

Quite the contrary. Terry Hufft's "ideal" employe at the Pleasanton Hotel would get a polite "no thank you" at either The Refectory or Hungry Hunter, the Valley's two largest chain steak and lobster houses.

They're not "franchises," Bob Gattis of the Refectory quickly pointed out, but corporate owned, local operations.

(There are only three "franchise" Refectories: a Chicago operation owned by John Peterson and George Eckart, two young entrepreneurs who trained for more than four years within the company-owned restaurants before going it on their own, and two Sacramento stores owned by Don McCloud. He, too, worked his way through the management structure.

(Franchises are individually owned and pay a percentage of their gross to the home company. Local operations are owned and managed by the corporation itself.

(There are no franchise Hungry Hunters.)

Neither Gattis nor the Hungry Hunter's Pete Kasavage "stand their people at attention" to see that they're there every morning.

But they won't hire the "professional," either.

"I'm here because I enjoy it," Kasavage said. "If I didn't I wouldn't be here anymore. The same holds for my employes."

The two cringe when you mention "professional." It's ambiguous.

They consider their employes professional in that they're well trained and loyal to both the customer and the company, but to them a pro is either a hard-core professional who needs the job or a "pro" in their particular sense of the word.

Neither wants a career employe whose life support and future comes from waiting on tables.

Nor would they accept the circuit worker who spends six or so months working for each restaurant.

"I don't like people who short change the angles," Kasavage said, putting it in his generation's language.

"I'd never hire someone like that," Gattis agreed. "They're not really dependable. Not because they won't show up for work, but because I know they'll leave as soon as they're tired of the job.

"They need the money, but they're bored. They'll just keep shuffling from store to store."

What happens to them?

It's almost impossible to say. None can be more than 30-years-old.

Neither Kasavage nor Gattis would hire someone "with a pack on their backs and a motorcycle outside."

Gattis, having been one of the "kids" giving "that kind of service" when he paid his dues as a waiter, takes issue with Hufft's appraisement of the maturity and responsibility shown by the typical steak and lobster employe.

"An employe is what the management of the restaurant makes of him or her," he said, adding he probably wouldn't have hired the "no-show" waitress in the first place.

Kasavage tells his new employes "We don't fire anybody. You fire yourself."

"But I don't think I'd have hired her in the first place." She short changes the angles.

Gattis calls them "short hitters."

Neither would hire someone who needs the job. Those are the "hard-core pros."

"People work here because they want to," Gattis said, "because it's fun."

The mistakes? That, both agree, is the responsibility of the management. Sloppy training and supervision breeds a sloppy restaurant, whether it's the most flagrantly non union, "unprofessional" shop in town, or the most elaborate continental restaurant.

People work the sub-culture of the steak and lobster circuit because they get to be among their peers, Kasavage offered. There's a light, relaxed atmosphere in these restaurants," Gattis said, one he doesn't believe is provided by help that has to work to support families, pay off a pool or buy a second car.

The turnover, when kept to a year, helps rather than hinders business, he added. "It brings in new ideas along with the fresh faces. The people aren't stale and they give off a happy, "glad to be here" attitude.

Most of their employes are students. They certainly "need" their jobs, both agree, but it's not the same "need" employed in the old guard establishments.

The "job" is not the first priority in their lives. For some it's school, while others are "stutter-stepping" after finishing college, waiting to pick their careers.

They don't hire union employes, and the employes definitely don't want to be union.

The pay is considerably below union wages, generally the legal minimum of $2 per hour for waiters and waitresses, minus the allowable contributions toward the minimum wage: 25-cents from tips and 15-cents deducted for food.

Tips average some $30 per night, and employes receive a 40- to 60-percent discount on food and drinks.

Both restaurants offer optional health care packages for all employes, although students are generally covered through parents or college.

And the employes — almost adamantly — want nothing to do with a union.

The thought makes them snicker.

Some observers interpret this as an "anti-establishment" attitude, more or less an extension of the "do your own thing" attitude" considered by some the first signs of the crumbling of Western Civilization.

But to the "kids" who work the stores — and Hufft is more than right when he says "they don't want to work all week" — there's nothing "anti" about it.

The feeling, if you've ever seen a steak and lobster house "cooking" on a Saturday night could never be construed as "anti-anything," Gattis feels.

To paraphrase Nietzsche, "If you would know how I think, listen not to what I say, but how I say it."

Wednesday: Employe impressions. Who works the houses and why.

Safe boating begins in dry dock, says Neal Hilliard.

Mayor proclaims safe boat week

PLEASANTON — Safe Boating Week is about to be "launched".

Mayor Ed Kinney has proclaimed the week of June 29 through July 5 safe boating week, as the recreational season gets off to a big start with Fourth of July Weekend.

Neal Hilliard, past commander of Pleasanton Flotilla 96 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and present operations officer for Division IX, accepted the proclamation on behalf of the flotilla.

The local Coast Guard group will inspect any boat free, giving a thorough safety check to everything from motor to horn.

As part of the national Safe Boating Week, flotilla members will also participate in the Alameda County Fair parade.

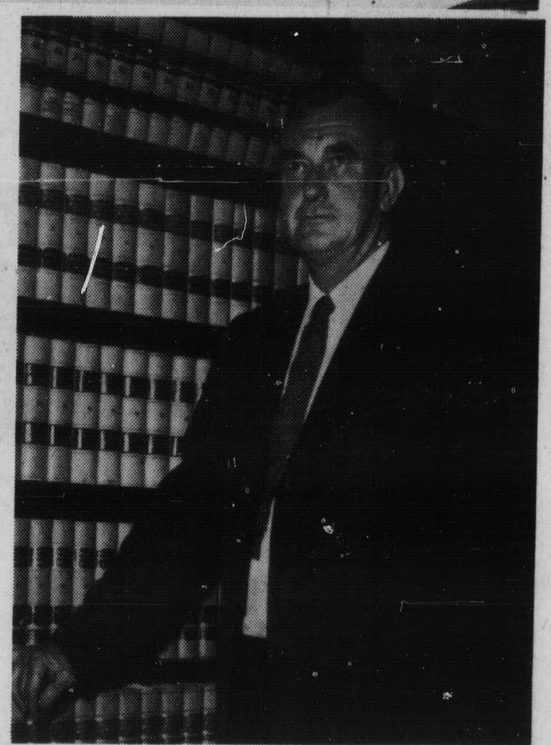
They will be promoting safe boating by patroling at Del Valle Reservoir and by conducting free boating classes beginning Sept. 9 at Franklin Savings and Loan.

Further information on the group and its programs is available from Hilliard at 447-9556 or flotilla commander Lorin Gillespie at 471-9674.

SR homeowners' meet

SAN RAMON — The local homeowners' association plans on a short agenda for this Thursday's 7:30 p.m. meeting at Neil Armstrong School.

Items for discussion include Contra Costa County's three-page letter of recommendations for improved safety at the San Ramon Valley Boulevard/Pine Valley Road intersection, proposed actions on new subdivisions in the unincorporated San Ramon area, and reports on recent local and county meetings.



A new muni judge

In rites set for 4 p.m. Monday at the Pleasanton Justice Court, Judge William Gale will be elevated to the Municipal bench for the Livermore-Pleasanton Judicial District. A local attorney since 1947 and Judge of the Pleasanton Judicial District since January of 1953, Judge Gale was elevated to a fulltime role with the muni court where he will share judicial duties for the valley with Judge John A. Lewis.

Pleasanton mulls sewer plant costs

PLEASANTON - The city council will be asked Monday night to spend an additional $23,000 on its antiquated Sunol Boulevard sewage treatment plant.

That request is being made because that old plant will have to be maintained in operating condition for at least another five years — until a new plant is built or the city consolidates with the Valley Community Services District facility.

The latest $23,000 expenditure — which is in addition to more than $350,000 that has already been spent on that plant — would allow the old digester to be refurbished to be used as a back-up. That expenditure, according to Kennedy Engineers, "could significantly increase the wastewater treatment reliability" at that facility.

The rehabilitation of that component "should last for 10 years," the consultant report adds.

To put that proposed expenditure into perspective, Kennedy Engineers estimate a new domed roof for the old digester would cost approximately $50,000 while construction of a "new digestion tank of this capacity would cost in excess of $250,000."

The city authorized construction of a new digester last year because the old one was dangerously weak and was a major source of the persistent odor problems that had plagued that plant for years.

The council will also hear reports on the status of the Hopyard Road line repairs, the odor control Mocho Pump station and the status of a long-term solution to the sewer problem.

Prior to the 8 p.m. meeting at the Pleasanton Justice Court, 30 West Angela St., the council will meet as the Pleasanton Redevelopment Agency at 7:30 p.m. Helen Tirsell, chairwoman of the Congress of Valley Agencies, will address the council at 7 p.m. on its refusal to submit plans for the regional shopping center for review.

Planners to ponder Sunol plan

Alameda County Bureau

The controversial Burr Ranch development on Sunol Ridge will come up before the Alameda County Planning Commission Monday at 1:30 p.m. in Hayward at the County Public Works Building.

Edwin Burr submitted a tentative parcel map to Planning Director Bill Fraley that included eight houses on highly visible land above Kilkare Road near its intersection with Niles Canyon Road. Fraley rejected the map and Burr has appealed to the full Planning Commission to overthrow that ruling.

Burr wants to subdivide 1,520 acres into nine plots. One of the plots would be 655 acres and would not be developed while the other eight — ranging in size from 103 to 125 acres — would each have one home.

Tentative plans call for springs to supply the water, septic tanks to supply the sewage treatment and existing agencies to supply fire protection.

Some resident fear that if this development is approved it will open up the rest of the ridgelands to similar subdivisions.

Fraley rejected the tentative parcel map for two main reasons. The first was that the proposed access road would be unsafe and the second was that the project is not consistent with the general plan for the Pleasanton-Dublin hill area.

COVA's shopping hub review before council

PLEASANTON - The month-long dispute between the City of Pleasanton and the Congress of Valley Agencies is expected to come to a head Monday night.

The dispute has come about because Pleasanton refuses to submit its plans for the mammoth regional shopping center to COVA for review.

COVA Chairwoman Helen Tirsell will address the city council at 7 p.m. Monday on that issue Pleasanton has threatened to pull out of COVA if its persists in its request for a review of the center plans.

The city contends COVA, which was formed a year ago as a successor to the Valley Planning Committee, does not have the jurisdiction — under its by-laws — to review land use plans within municipal limits limits.

COVA, on the other hand, maintains that, as a forum for the valley communities, it should be allowed to review plans such as the shopping center, which will have a major impact on the valley.

Councilman Roger McLain, who two weeks ago urged the city to withdraw from COVA, has reaffirmed that position.

He referred to Tirsell's alleged statement that COVA should "take a position" on the shopping center plans and added, "There are those in COVA who want that organization to be something other than the original intent; that is to say an organization that would benefit the valley through a unified expression, on those matters that had valley-wide implications, to agencies outside the valley."

McLain said he is convinced, "...this is not possible via COVA."

The city remains adamant in its position not to allow COVA to review and take a position on the shopping center, which after years of delay, is now looking to a 1977 construction start.

The council, however, has agreed to listen to Tirsell's reasoning this Monday at 7 p.m.

COVA is composed of representatives of Livermore, Pleasanton, the Valley Community Services District and Zone 7.

Quiz data in Murray requested

A questionnaire on what students should know when they leave eighth grade has been distributed late to many parents in the Murray Elementary School District, and officials are urging that the questionnaires still be returned regardless of the due date.

A mailing foulup caused many of the forms to get out late and thus citizens in MESD often received the questionnaires after the due date.

MESD officials still want input from the parents on eighth grade exit level standards and are urging that the forms be filled out and returned as soon as possible.

Internal combustion engines

Sandia scientist search for gas-burning clues

ROBERT SETCHELL CHECKS THE PROGRESS OF A RAMAN SCATTERING EXPERIMENT

The technique allows the components of a flame to be identified

Second of two parts

One of the least mysterious things in Ameriea is the internal combustion engine.

Almost everyone has one in their car or running their lawnmower and almost anyone can tell you basically what goes on, but scientists and laymen alike really don't know how gasoline burns.

Although Dr. Danny Hartley and his co-workers at Sandia Laboratory in Livermore know what goes into gasoline and what comes out when it is burned, they are quite interested in the exact process involved.

If internal combustion engines could be made to run at only 10 per cent higher efficiency, the nation could save $140 million a year. If scientists could determine exactly why an engine misfires when the ratio of air to gas approaches 20 to 1, perhaps the structure of the engine could be modified to allow the leaner mixture to run the machine. If the mixture was leaner, gas would be saved.

So, to determine exactly what goes on when gasoline (or any other number of fuels) burns, Hartley and friends employ an array of almost science fiction-like devices.

Raman scattering, coherent anti-Stokes Raman scattering, hot film anemometry and laser Doppler velocimetry are just some of the techniques involved in the search for the nature of combustion.

Raman scattering is perhaps the most important tool, and also the youngest. It involves firing a laser into a flame and since lasers vibrate on very specfic frequencies the amount of energy going in can be calculated exactly.

All molecules three ways — electronicaionally and vibrationally — and each way is associated with a specific level of energy. When a laser is fired into a flame at a known energy and wavelength, only certain molecules will absorb that energy.

In Raman scattering, the energy is absorbed for only a tiny fraction of a second and then the molecule emits a photon, or lightwave. That photon has a characteristic energy level depending on what molecule emitted it and if the photons are measured and recorded, the constituent molecules of the flame can be analysed. However, it is necessary to know the energy levels of molecules and at what levels photons will emerge from the flame. Otherwise, it is impossible to set up instruments to track the amount of photons at a given energy level.

"For some gases the basic physcis hasn't been done yet" said Hartley. "That's one of the problems we've run into."

Since so little is known about combustion, the Sandia researchers are starting from scratch in many areas. They are interested in the concentration of certain molecules, their temperature and the patterns in which they move during burning and none of these areas has been investigated thoroughly.

Raman scattering is just the beginning step. Coherent anti-Stokes Raman uses two lasers to further excite an already excited molecule so that the emissions are easier to track.

Hot film anemometry measures the convective heat transfer properties of various gases and how fast they move when heated.

Laser Doppler velocimetry uses the intersection of two lasers —which forms a visible "fringe pattern" — and the measurement of the speed of tiny particles to determine velocity of the particles.

Hartley hopes to be able to come up with more substantial results with larger lasers than the 15 joule and 5 joule ones presently in use. (The Lawrence Livermore Laboratory has a 270 joule laser ready to fire.)

Although the study has been going on for only a short time, Hartley and his associates have come up with two important — though not earthshaking — results.

First, they have definitely identified the presence of "radicals" — molecules that don't normally occur in nature, like one atom of hydrogen and two of oxygen rather than vice versa — in flame.

It has been theorized that such radicals must exist, but the research at Sandia produced the first definite proof.

Also, many theorists had felt that the burning of gasoline in an engine occurred too fast for turbulence to really exist. They felt that all the gases were consumed almost immediately and that the turbulence — if any — was neither important nor measurable.

Hartley, though, feels the turbulence is important and states that it can be measured and its source identified.

"No one has really measured the scale of turbulence in an engine and we've been able to do that" he said.

Eventually, they may be able to tell you how your car works, and incidentally save millions of dollars in the bargain.

Valley couple spurs drive to aid refugees

LIVERMORE - Have any clothes you no longer need? How about bedding? Any household goods? Toys?

Jim and Jeri Mills will be happy to hear about it. Not for themselves, though. It's for the more than 30 Vietnamese refugees they are trying to find sponsors for here in the community.

"Everybody's got a closet full of things they don't need," said Jim, who will pick up any goods donated to the refugees.

They also are trying to place about 10 single men, most of whom are in their twenties and are laborers, and two families, one with four members and one with five members.

They themselves are the sponsor of the Bui family, which totals 16 — Bui, his wife, cousin, 10 children, daughter-in-law and two grandchildren.

"When they arrive, imagine finding beds for them," exclaimed Jeri.

A sponsor, Jeri explained, is one who opens his or her home to the Vietnamese to assist them in becoming self-sufficient. The refugees' umbrella organization will assist in any way it can and the Vietnamese are eligible for all the state and federal assistance programs, she added.

"The only burden is that there's an extra body in your home and if your house isn't big enough, perhaps you hve a vacant part of a duplex they can use," she pointed out.

"They all want jobs. None of them want to become dormant charges to anyone," she said.

The Mills will speak to ACCORD (A Coordinated Committee to Overcome Racial Division) Monday night at 7:30 p.m in the Livermore Presbyterian Church to discuss ways of coordinating support for Vietnamese refugees now in or about to arrive to the valley.

"I would appreciate anyone with an interest to come up and just say 'hi,' " invited Jim.

His ties to the refugees dates back a few months when he singlehandedly rescued more than 100 Vietnamese from Saigon and delivered them to safety on Guam.

The Mills put out a plea last week for sponsors and clothing, etc., but were disappointed in the community response — or gratified — depending on whether it's Jeri or Jim speaking.

They were able to place two young women in Livermore homes and received three donations of articles as a result of their plea.

"We were very disappointed but I think it's the response we expected. However, it's not the response we hoped for," commented Jeri.

"We don't need the entire 47,000, just a handful of good people. They're out there," said Jim enthusiastically

The Mills explained that the Vietnamese are forced to stay in the refugee camps until they can present proof of sponsorship. Many of Jim's acquaintances still were in Guam up until last week, when, according to the president, all were removed to the United States. Some now are at Camp Pendleton, Fort Chaffee in Arkansas and Indian Gap Town, Penn.

"As they come over from Guam they call me," said Jim. "They've even called from Guam. That old phone's been ringing all the time."

The Mills also have received a letter from Bui Thanh-Khier, one of the middle-aged men Jim assisted in Asia. His correspondence sheds much light on the plight many of the refugees are experiencing.

"Dear Jim, it was really a mess around here concerning logic and legality. At first we wait with patience for our turn to be orderly scheduled to leave Guam as normal as we wished, but everything turned out in reverse way.

"People who knows how to use short-cut introduction, profiteering, corruption and abuseness, pulling red string and even sexual seduction in diplomacy relation to get thing done.

"The day we arrived here the total of refugees was about 45,000 and now this number decreased gradually to approximately 19,000. Then unfortunately we were not lucky enough to be included in that 26,000 leaving people."

The letter goes on to tell how Bui Thanh-Khier brought his problem to the attention of the state department and was able to secure permission to leave for Camp Pendleton on the basis of Jim's help in the past

"We hope that we will be at Pendleton in the week to come. Myself I decide to stay there for a while in order to get in touch with old timer friend in looking for employment available if there is any.

"I remember your advice as when one wants to do something, get it done effectively."

Bui Thanh-Khier may already be in California. Can you help him? The Mills are waiting to know. They're at 443-3393.

Racial unit to organize for refugees

ACCORD (A Co-ordinating Committee to Overcome Racial Division) will serve as a clearing house for help for Valley Vietnamese refugees.

An organizing meeting will be held Monday, June 30 at 7:30 p.m. at the Livermore Presbyterian Church to discuss where support is available and where it is needed.

At this point, jobs, housing, clothing, money and volunteer time are needed. To volunteer help or get further information, call ACCORD at 443-5550.

Vandals hit Pleasanton neighborhood

PLEASANTON - Young vandals, perhaps feeling spry in the sudden summer showers Monday night, went on a street-side spree through the city, smashing car windows and raising havoc in residential neighborhoods.

Four residents reported damage to their cars Tuesday morning, each with smashed-in windows, the suspects apparently following the same pattern.

Carl E. Brickley, 206 Neal St., Jack Criqui, 1718 Beachwood Way, Robert L. Ferguson, 4156 Jensen St. and Blake Biggs, 4616 Las Lomitas Dr., gave police similar assessments of the damage.

Windows on the driver's side of all the vehicles were smashed in, while Ferguson reported an additional crack in the right front door of his 1953 Plymouth.

The cars and Brickley's pickup truck all were parked in front of their respective residences.

The incidents took place between midnight and shortly after 2 a.m., Tuesday.

Old-fashioned skill invites youthful audience at fair

Thoroughly in keeping with the nostalgic appeal of domestic arts at the Alameda County Fair, is the old-fashioned art of quilting which appears to have gained a following among the not-so-old-fashioned.

Quilting expert Josephine Callabresi of Livermore has noticed a revival of interest among young people in the art of "piece and pierce" during the past five years.

"There was a time when a person who quilted was considered an old granny, but now the young people show the most interest in wanting to know just how it's done whenever I'm asked to demonstrate," she explains. Josephine will be featured in a quilting demonstration Monday from 4 to 10 p.m. at the county fair. She will also give instructions on how to transfer a quilting design onto the large square after piecing.

To young people Josephine would recommend the pride of accomplishment and the fun of socializing at leisure with friends while working on a quilt as a group project.

"We take great pride in a very fine stitch, and some can make nine or more stitches per inch," she declares "Stitching well-done lasts until the material wears out. It takes time, but it's not supposed to be done in a hurry."

Josephine can remember learning the skill as a girl at quilting bees in Kansas where a group would occasionally assemble from nine o'clock to four, and finish a quilt in one month!

Quilting takes time, but it can be time to enjoy the company of friends at leisure, too.

Mrs. Callabresi has designed quilts for 35 years, and is saving several she has made to give to her grandchildren some day. She will display samples of her work at the fair.

MONDAY FAIR ATTRACTION

Lively hand-made quilt, designed in a quilting pattern aptly named 'Tango Daisy, is the creation of Bessie Cox, Frances Marlowe, Josephine Callabresi and Edith Sterder of Livermore. It is rolled on a 35-year-old frame which enables up to six quilters to work it while enjoying each other's company at leisure.

RACING ENTHUSIASTS

Betty Sherman and Lorraine Rosenquist of Dublin's Court St. Raymond oversee the thoroughbred exercise sessions as they eagerly await their Day at the Races July 1.

They're off and running ... to the window!

Some of the wildest action during Alameda County Fair time is watching women bet on the horses. They appear to use absolutely no logic. It's either the size of the horse, or his "cute" name, or the colors of the jockey's shirt that sends them on a wild rush to the "two-to-show" window.

Court St. Raymond No. 2057 of the Catholic Daughters of America had so much fun doing it last year, the club is anticipating its second Members Day At The Races, Tuesday, July 1. have reserved a limited block of seats and invite their friends to join them. The four-dollar ticket entitles you to fair admission, entrance to the race track and a grandstand seat. Those interested are asked to contact Chairman Betty Sherman at 828-2104.

Any money realized as profit from this affair will go into the Catholic Daughter's diaper and layette fund. One of the court's works of charity is to provide free diapers, blankets and layettes to any needy expectant mother in the Livermore-Amador Valley.

They receive referrals from all public service agencies. If any church or group would like more information about this service of the Catholic Daughters, please call Mary Ladner, 828-1054.

Pleasanton to mull sewer plant costs

Brita is a 16-year-old from Stockholm, Sweden, excited about sharing her culture with a family in the United States, to introduce them to the special foods, customs and attitudes which give her country its unique identity.

She will be among teenagers from Europe, South America and the Far East arriving this fall in the United States as part of the Youth for Understanding exchange program, a non-profit organization which receives an annual grant from the U.S. Department of State.

Youth for Understanding Representative Eleanor Mote of Pleasanton (846-5324) will be placing students from 17 countries in Pleasanton homes.

According to Mrs. Mote, the student guest is treated as a member of the new family with the same responsibilities and privileges as other children in the home. Host families provide the necessities while students are responsible for personal expenses.

Amador reunion brings $400

A reunion of Amador Valley High classes of 1954 through 1959 has resulted in $400 being raised as a donation to the Tom Hart Memorial Fund.

Hart, a teacher and administrator in the Amador-Pleasanton school district for two decades before his death last winter, instructed many of those who attended the reunion last month at the Sunol Valley Golf and Country Club. Music of the 50s was provided by Harry Kerr and Mrs. Anne Borame Reinhart of the reunion committee reports the event 'twas a bubbling success."

This year's recipient of a Tom Hart Memorial Scholarship was Bob Vierra.

Committee chairwomen for the event included Mrs. Gayle Cairo Kremers, Mrs. Joyce Griffetts Erdman, Mrs. Pat Hewitson Kates, Mrs. Stella Watson Zaro, Mrs. Karen Grifetts Fornaciari and Mrs. Anne Borame Reinhart.

Former teachers of these alumni present were Mrs. Helen Vardon, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Sweeney and Mr. and Mrs. Don Seaver.

Mrs. Mary Hart expressed her gratefullness for the generous contributions to the Hart Memorial Fund.

Pleasanton playground activites under way

Summer playground activities for children aged 6 to 12 years are now underway at four schools in Pleasanton, the Recreation Department announced.

Activities including arts and crafts, table games, sports, music, and special events will be offered during the open playground period. Two leaders will supervise activities, and children can come and go as they please.

The first excursion will be to Marine World Africa U.S.A. on Tuesday, July 1. Those interested must sign up before Friday, June 27 at any of the above playgrounds.

Spa enhances pool

An unusual effect is achieved for the Rnon Hill residence in Pleasanton. Water flows from a depression in the rock wall of the spa into the pool. Installations pictured this week were created by Continental Pools.

Harriet Plummer School

Water Safety is emphasized

Harriet Plummer's three years of experience in teaching water safety to over 1,500 non-swimmers has proven to be a most interesting career.

The majority of her students are children aged from 3 months to five years, but she will teach people of any age in Southern Alameda or Contra Costa Countries to swim.

"Adults are the easiest to teach, but the hardest to relax," says the well-tanned woman of 25. "Any adult who goes to the trouble of taking lessons really wants to learn, and doesn't have a mother pushing him. They are usually very cooperativd and easy to teach," she says.

Plummer emphasizes that the main concept is water safety. "I call it 'drown-proofing' — a one-year old can't learn to swim, but can roll over and float," she says.

By the end of five lessons, Plummer says her students can breathe while swimming, hold their breath 15-20 seconds underwater, and jump in and swim to the other side.

"Breathing comes very naturally under three years of age," Plummer says, but indicates that children 15-16 months old drink water, although they get over that quickly.

She has taught entire families to be water safe, but allows only one instructor and one pupil in the pool at the same time. "This eliminates distractions and allows one-on-one teaching, which produces optimal results," Plummer says.

A 75 year old woman once took lessons from her, because she was moving to Clear Lake with four grandchildren and felt it her duty to swim with them.

"It only took four weeks for her to swim hand over hand, and could swim ten to twelve laps.," Plummer says.

"It's mainly a confidence sport — confidence in yourself and your ability to swim."

Plummer has three instructors that work with her, passed by the Red Cross and personally trained in her ways of teaching. Her methods put the child in the water the first lesson, and produce quick results.

"We teach to the individual. Each person's physical ability has to be compensated for," she says.

Plummer is a student at San Francisco State University, majoring in Physical Therapy. She intends to continue teaching water safety after graduation.

She will teach people of all ages, and those with either a physical or mental handicap, day or night. Lessons can be administered at any of her three pools in Pleasanton, Livermore, or Fremont, or at the customer's pool.

Lessons cost $25 for five one-half hour sessions daily, or $15 for each individual in a group of four or less.

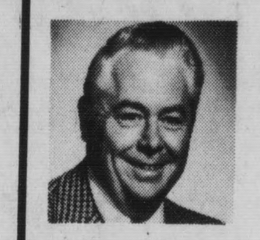
The Harriet Plummer Aquatic School can be contacted by phoning 462-3981 or 846-4395 .

Quiz tests swimming basics

Take this test and check your knowledge of swimming, famous swimmers and the basic rules of swimming.

1. Name three of the five basic swim strokes? 2. Name four of the seven rules of safety when you are around water? 4. Who is Johnny Weissmuller? 5. Name the female movie star who made swimming an important part of her movies? 6. Who won the most Olympic Gold Medals for swimming and how many did he win? 7. The is considred the fastest swim stroke? 8. Who developed the "Butterfly stroke"? 9. What is the first float a young child usually learns? 10. Where was the "Buster" Crabbe, world champion swimmer and television star born?

Now check your answers and see if you are really a swimming expert. 1. The five basic swim strokes are the American Crawl, the Breaststroke, the Butterfly Stroke, the Back-Stroke, and the side stroke. 2. The following are the seven basic rules of safety: Swim only in areas that are protected by lifeguards. Swim with someone who can help in an emergency. Never jump into strange waters. Never leave a small child alone in or near the water. Do not swim for at least one hour after eating. A lways obey rules posted at beaches and pools. 3. Florence Chadwick became the first woman to swim the English Channel from France to Great Britian in the year 1950. 4. Johnny Weimuller set more than 50 world and American swim records in the 1920's and in the 1930's became even more famous as the movie hero "Tarzan". 5. Ester Williams made many movies in the 1940's and early 1950's as a movie actress who featured synchronized swimming in most of her films. 6. Mark Spitz won 7 Gold Medals. 7. The American Crawl or Free Style is considered the fastest stroke in swimming. 9. A young child usually learns the Jelly Fish Float first. 10. "Buster" Crabbe was born in Oakland, California in 1908.



Pooling ideas

by Bob Anglin

Building a pool in your backyard can be a happy experience, if you use good judgement in selecting your contractor. Establish some standards the pool company should meet.

Continental Pools has been building pools in this area since 1966 and the President of the company supervised construction for two other companies for twelve years prior to that or a total of twenty years, building pools, facing all the various problems that can arise in such construction.

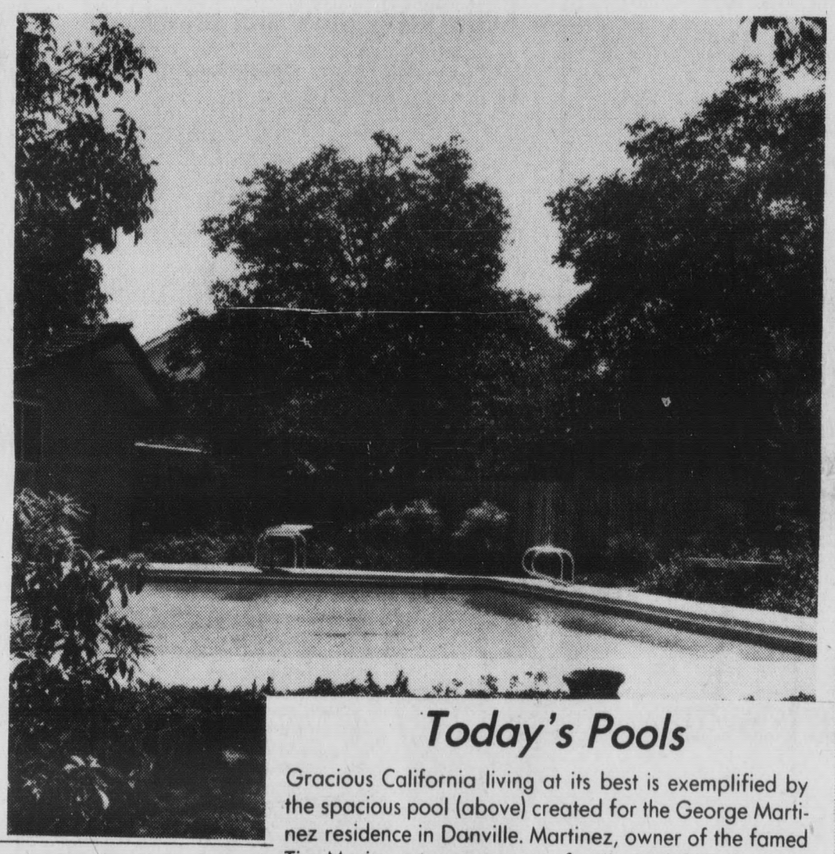
They are not the only company here with similar experience, however, a complete list of hundreds of pools built is available, so prospective customers could contact previous customers to assure themselves of the builders ability to perform, and his willingness to back warranties and guarantees. Any builder you want to do business with should be able to do likewise.

Of course, in this country, with free enterprise, new companies are started, and to be fair, deserve the opportunity to establish themselves. However, this should not be done at the buyers risk. To avoid any financial risk, you the buyer can require that your contractor supply a performance and payment bond prior to commencement of the work. This extra expense may eat up any price advantage offered, but is the only real protection known.

After the pool is built, we guarantee our work to be free from defects in material and workmanship for a period of one year, and the pool structure is guaranteed to remain structurally sound as long as you own it. This implies an ability to remain financially sound, so we'll be around in case you do have a problem. So, a history of sound management is important to you the customer.

Consumer organizations are available to the public, such as the Better Business Bureau, where you can get some idea of the company you plan to buy from. It is recommended you contact them, prior to calling for an estimate.

With a good builder, and proper planning and construction, you can expect many happy, carefree years of swimming and enjoyment.



Today's Pools

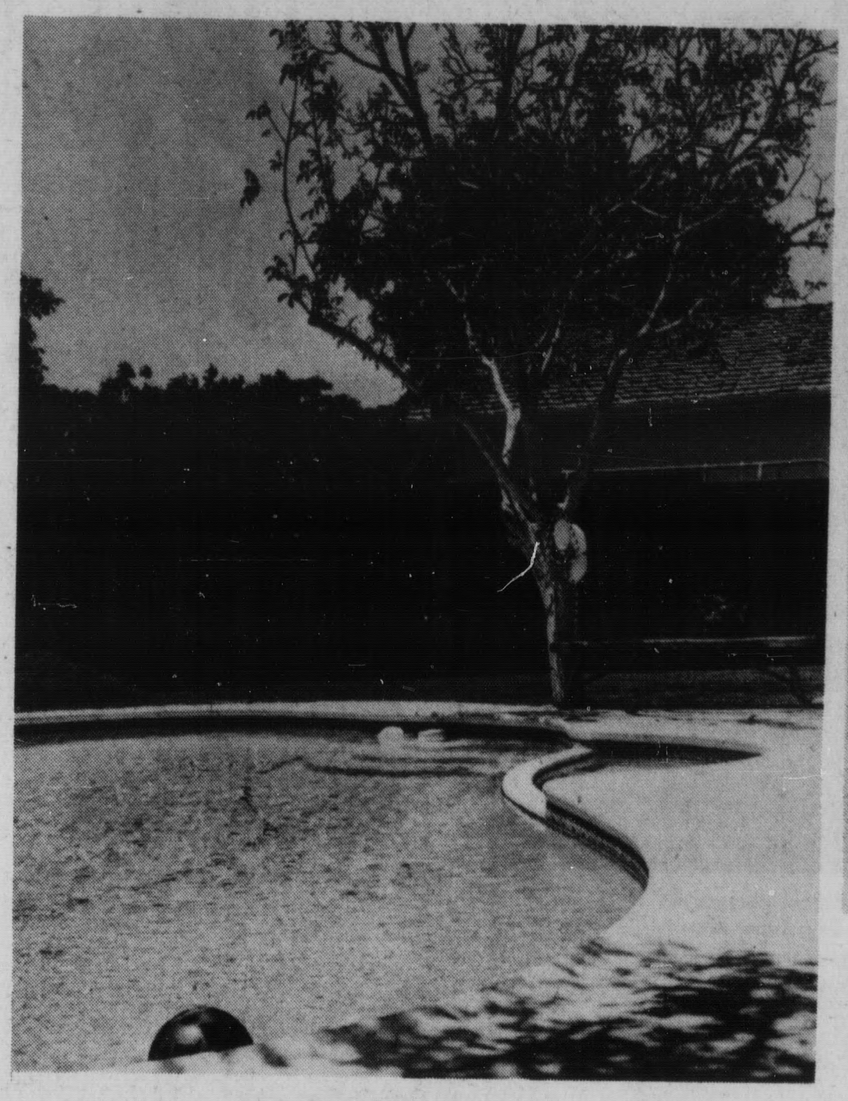
Pools add fun, enjoyment



Bubbling water

The hill site at the Ted Myers residence in Pleasanton makes an ideal setting for the fall, which supplies their pool with bubbling fresh water. Myers, of Valley Realty in Pleasanton, has spent many hours creating the natural beauty of this backyard paradise. All pools pictured on this page were created by Continental Pools.

Hikes, hot dogs, horses and hootenannys: Livermore Rec District dishes up summer fun

LIVERMORE - There's still time for local children — and adults — to get in on the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District's summerful of fun.

For vacationers, Camp Shelly beckons in the Sierra. Campsites are huge, improvements are many, it's within walking distance of Emerald Beach at Lake Tahoe, and the casinos of South Tahoe are 20 minutes away by car.

The LARPD-leased camp costs $2.50 per car per night for Livermore residents. Registration, as with all programs, is accomplished in the LARPD office at the end of Trevarno Road.

Children may learn to ride and care for a horse at Camp Bronco, located at Veterans Park on Arroyo Road. Sailing lessons are available at Camp El Toro; campers are transported to Del Valle Lake from downtown.

Camp Totem and Camp Little Totem are low-priced day camps that offer a variety of experiences for small children. For Mom and Pop, the long list includes swim, art, golf, tennis and belly dancing lessons.

The Livermore Area Recreation and Park District may be contacted weekdays at 447-7300 for details.

The 'Real-View'

by Pat Schnedl

The distinguished CENTURY 21 real estate firm is opening its second office in Livermore at 158 Maple St. The original Century 21 office - Charlie Brown Realtor - has been in Livermore since 1973 at 2157 First St. Shown below is Charlie Brown welcoming Tricia and Pat O'Keefe who will operate the Maple St. office. The O'Keefe team brings a wealth of real estate expertise to the Century 21 family, with nine years of experience in the field. Now, by joining Century 21, they can bring the best of two worlds to your real estate needs.

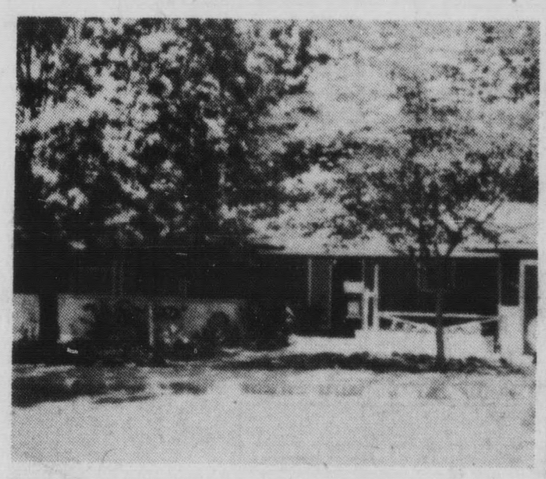
Tricia & Pat O'Keefe Open Second Century 21 Livermore Office

"Each Century 21 office, unlike other national companies, is independently owned," explains Charlie Brown. "Therefore, each office has its own personality. I know Century 21 can help every member of the community, and we want to give everyone, clients or prospective sales agents, a choice of Century 21 benefits."

"The unique personality of each office," remarks Pat O'Keefe, "will give our clients the strongest local real estate sales team, with complete knowledge of their needs."

Tricia feels strongly that "the National Advertising Program, the International Referral System, and the Training Academies will provide my clients with professional agents. With two Century 21 offices in Livermore, we cannot help but provide better service to the Community."

Home of the Week



Beautiful home, beautiful location, yes, it's in Pleasanton Heights! 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, surrounded by mature trees, low maintenance front yard, with large, private tree-shrouded rear yard with nice garden presently planted for you to harvest. Living room opens via large sliding door onto expanse of patio. Plenty of room for the kids to play and possible side yard access for Dad's boat. A great value and FHA or VA deals are welcome. $44,950. For information call Dean Wagerman at HERITAGE REALTY, Dublin, 828-6060, OR COME BY TODAY and see this lovely home at 560 Neal St., Pleasanton.

Harry Molz Takes The Helm At WOODREN REALTY in Dublin

Palo Alto scientists join project

Computer may aid lab search for fusion energy

While researchers at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory are hard at work producing nuclear fusion in the laboratories, a group of scientists in Palo Alto are trying to sidestep the difficult and expensive experimental work.

They are engaged in setting up a computer model of fusion that will tell scientists what happens and what is necessary to make fusion a commercial power source.

Computer models are a relatively new development, and rely on quantifying all elements of the reaction to be studied. Computer scientists believe that if all the elements in a process can be given numerical values the process can be programmed into a computer.

Then, rather than set upelaborate and time-consuming experiments that might be ruined by technical flaws, any alterations in the parameters of the experiment can be changed simply by changing the program of the computer.

If successful, such a computer model of fusion could save millions of dollars and thousands of man-hours by directing scientists down the right paths of research.

However, for sueh a computer model to be constructed, the theory of what happens must be accurate. For fusion — which involves the combination of atoms at high temperature and high pressure — the theory is not complete.

Plasma, which is the superheated gas that serves as the breeding ground for fusion, is not well understood and the turbulence inside it is tremendous. The effect of heat —in the millions of degrees — and the collisions of the atoms sets up an extremely complex flow.

Dr. Baxter Armstrong of the IBM Scientific Center in Palo Alto outlined the two prime methods of quantifying plasmas. The first, and most thorough, is to plot the path of each individual particle and its effects on other particles and their effects on it.

Another approach is to concentrate on just the particles found within a specified volume and velocity range, rather than trying to follow all the individual particles.

"Both of these modeling methods, which complement each other in certain respects, have limitations which are directly related to the speed and the memory of existing computer systems" Armstrong said.

Current simulations are based on no more than 100,000 particles.

Mutuel network

Mike Zampa

The last time I wagered on a horse was two years ago during the home stretch of the Alameda County Fair. Didn't even go to the track to part with my money.

We had a high school youngster working for us then who loved the ponies. Despite a baby's face and duck down on his chin, he phonegled his way up to the $2 window every day of the meet.

He was entrusted with the one hot tip of my lifetime. He was also the one who explained to me that if a horse finished first, and you bet on him for third, you still got cash back. I didn't know much about pari mutuel betting in those days. If you want to know the truth, I still don't know what pari mutuel means.

In any event, the editor of the newspaper had just returned from a luncheon with some local political cronies. The mayor of Pleasanton, he said, had slipped him a sure thing on the daily double.

At the time I was certain that official as high up as a mayor must be privy to secret, nay almost illegal information concerning the outcome of horse races.

In Chicago perhaps that's true. But in Pleasanton, I'm not sure they even issue the mayor a complimentary grandstand pass any more, much less ply him with tips straight from the jockey's shorts.

Nevertheless, his inside dope created a hubbub in our editorial office (a converted dress shop at the time).

We made plans with our 17-year-old track expert. He explained the possible return on our investments, and as I recal, seemed to minimize the risk involved. Not the risk of his apprehension for illegal wagering — we didn't give a damn — but the chances of losing our money.

That was crucial, because then, as now, sports writers were underpaid. Perhaps that's why so many hang out at the track, hoping to augment their income.

Our young courier placed the bets with ease. We formed some kind of partnership to beef up our wager on the mayor's tip. He free-lanced at the $2 window on every other race that day.

The first half of the double went off smoothly, following the mayor's forecasted form. In the second half of the bill, however, his horse finished a titillating second.

I was not angered, but thrilled, to be so close. At least until I found out they didn't pay off for close.

It's been two years since that last bet, and now another season of racing is coming to Pleasanton. If I could track down that mayor, (never did know his name) and line up my young runner again, I'd be willing to risk a few more dollars. Wouldn't do it on my own. I might wind up placing $2 on a trainer or a groom. Never have opened up a racing form.

The problem is that now, more than ever, going to the track in Pleasanton, or for that matter anywhere along the county fair circuit, is fashionable.

Attendance marks were established all over Northern California last summer. This season at Vallejo, the first stop on the summer tour, they're knocking them dead again.

Halfway through the meet, fair directors were projecting new standards for attendance and handle. They neared a $1 million day last weekend at the tiny Solano Fairgrounds track.

Pleasanton racing directors are expecting more of the same when the horses start running Monday.

In an age where dollars buy less and less, and people holler more and more, they're spending like never before at the track. There will undoubtedly be a number of days in the next two weeks when more than $1 million is wagered.

Could it be that all of us, not just sports writers, are searching for the one dream payoff to beef up dwindling bank accounts? Or is there just more money floating about for entertainment than we might believe?

Whatever the answer, fair operators are eagerly anticipating a bountiful meet. A couple of more $2 windows have been added to accomodate the crush of horse players. And the program has been rearranged to yield a larger handle.

That involves the insertion of quarterhorses, traditionally a weak draw at the fair, in the heart of the daily schedule.

The sprinters will run in the first and seventh races this year instead of the first and second. Originally the switch was accomplished at the request of quarterhorse racers. They felt slighted by their position at the beginning of the program. Attendance was low during the first few races, and so were the purses. The wagering was also light.

Quarterhorse wagering has picked up dramatically at Vallejo by running the ponies in the seventh race. Meanwhile, the thoroughbreds taking their place early in the day are producing a handle nearly commensurate with last year, when they held the prime spot. The net gain has been a big boon at Vallejo.

Undoubtedly the same will hold true here.

Add to that the fact the Fourth of July is a three-day weekend this year, and it should be an all-time two weeks of racing.

All right. Where's the mayor?

Two local riders ready for Fair

It is an axiom of sport that when "the legs go", careers end.

But in horse racing, where it's the animal's legs that count, jockeys ride as long as their luck holds out and their weight stays down.

Thus, the turf sport produces many athletes who make Moses Malone look like a late bloomer or who show George Blanda up as a fresh kid.

As the Alameda County Fair meet opens tomorrow afternoon (post time 1:30 p.m. , nowhere will the contrast be more apparent than between a pair of local riders.

Tommy Burkes, although just 19, has already ridden for two years without the five-pound apprentice allowance. Yet Mel Lewis, the 59-year old director of the Western Jockey's Guild, dwarfs Burkes budding career with a record of 35 years of running on tracks in Colorado and Northern California.

Lewis, whose ability to escape injury (one broken collarbone in a third of a century) has no doubt prolonged his track life, sees no need to retire in the near future.

"I'll try to last til I'm 65 and can collect my old age pension," he said. The Pleasanton resident explained that while advancing age has not forced him to change his riding style, he has accepted fewer mounts in recent years.

"I'm still free-lancing, but I try to ride only in stakes and other important races," he said, adding, "I don't look for any new business either. I've been riding just for old customers like Jerry Dutton."

On a similar subject Burkes, a former Amador Valley High student, sees no reason to follow the lead of many modern athletes who tend to "quit when they're ahead."

"I'll ride as long as I can keep my weight down," said Burkes, whose father trains thoroughbreds. "It's something I've wanted to do since grade school."

Despite having already suffered the agonies of a broken back, fear of injury doesn't enter into Tommy's thinking. "If I was scared of getting hurt," he said, "I'd quit."

Although he topped the Bay Area's riders as an apprentice, Burkes has received fewer mounts since that time.

"When you're an apprentice , trainers will use you just for the allowance. But after that first year, they like to give you time to develop," the tatooed (upper right arm) jockey said.

"But I've always had the ability and now I feel I can do anything anyone else can do." Burkes quickly gained a reputation as hot-tempered after several fightshin his rookie year. Now he doesn't resort to fisticuffs unless he has to.

"And I don't have to very often," he said, "Everyone's riding a lot cleaner."

Lewis agreed that a lessening of on-course rule-bending was one of the major changes he had noticed in 30 years of riding on the NorCal circuit.

"The fairs have also upgraded accomodations at the tracks and, in the last seven years or so, have gotten a lot better grade of horses," the slender veteran added.

While Burkes was non-commital about any desire to do well at his home town track, Lewis admittedhto wanting to do better here but said, "It always seems to turn out the other way."

As for peculiarities of the P-town oval, Burkes said, "It's a little narrower." But this is of little consequence since riders rarely steer their mounts more than halfway out from the rail.

Burkes, a practicing bachelor, recently bought a house in the town he grew up in, but a true phenomenon has been the number of jockeys migrating to Pleasanton. Despite its total of just 12 racing days, Pleasanton provides the riders with a good base of operations.

"It's centrally located," says 20-year resident Lewis, "I can commute to every track except Santa Rosa and Sacramento. It's a nice area, I'll probably retire here."

The pair are joined by Harris Hawkenson, Levi Gomez and several jockey room valets as Valley residents. Burkes, Lewis and Hawkenson are expected to see daily action in the coming two weeks.

Hexcel rally tops Naz

Hexcel seemed up against a wall in Livermore Slow-Pitch softball last week, having yielded two runs to Nazarene Church in the top of the eighth inning.

The Hexcels rallied for three runs in the bottom of the inning, however, to notch out a 7-6 triumph.

Base hits by Ric Vanderbar and Ed Alexander primed the winning outburst.

Hexcel owned a 2-0 lead after three innings, but Nazarene bounced back with four in the fourth inning, highlighted by Gary Schucknect's run-scoring double.

Hexcel tied it in the fifth inning at 4-4, when Phil Kerrigak lashed a two-run double.

In other action, Kavanagh Liquors dampened the spirits of Livermore Dublin Disposal with an 8-3 triumph. Winning pitcher Al Garrano blanked the Disposals through the first five innings.

Jim Kasamuri was the batting hero for Kavanagh, lashing a two-run double in the top of the third inning, and a two-run single in the fourth.He singled again in the seventh inning. Jerry Girard's double also produced a run in the third.

Bob Vallaga and Frank Altorre drove in runs for the losers.

Blair Foods bounced Codiroli Ford, 20-10, helped by two-run homers from Ron Rasmussen and Mike Sorini. Mike Fitzmoris drove in three runs.

Labor unions and the local beanery

"Dining out" is a tradition as revered as any heritage value in this valley's 100 years of urbanization. From the Brass Rail in San Ramon to the Hungry Truck near the Altamont, for a pot of beans in Sunol or a fresh cheese sandwich in Pleasanton, there has always been a particular "gourmet touch" to this one small part of the world.

Now that tradition is perhaps threatened as never before, for reasons that seem beyond the control of the local caterers, in a fight which has its origins in places like Hayward,Chicago and New York. But the impact, inevitably, will be on a unique valley industry, and on the people who have enjoyed that faire.

The Times undertook to tell the story of organized labor's activity at certain of the valley's dining spots not because we champion the cause of the local dining interests to the detriment of the culinary unions. That is not the issue.

What we are concerned with — and why we feel compelled to expose "the battle for the restaurants" — is the unfair burden being placed on the full-menu, home-owned dining center. It is a burden that could remove that traditional valley business from the local scene.

Briefly stated, the unions seem intent upon bringing those smaller dineries into their ranks; there is no evidence however that the chain-operated speciality restaurants are to being similarly recruited.

We are all aware of the fight by organized labor to keep the MacDonald's hamburger chain from locating in San Francisco, for the acknowledged reason that this biggest of food dispensers "refused to hire union help." Labor's answer has apparently been to simply keep those huge "teenage employment centers" out of a nice union town like San Francisco.

They are not so easily frozen out of suburbia or the hinterland spots, it would appear. Food chains owned or controlled by Getty Oil, Carnation Milk and the like are already well entrenched throughout this valley, and in similar Bay Area spots. They are all, to our knowledge at least, staffed by non-union help, particularly on the counters and tables.

Those same "short order houses" would be tough competition for the home-owned, full-menu house even if they all paid the same wage scales. But to give the big operator the further advantage of hiring unskilled young people, while the little guy must pay full union wages and benefits, is an injustice both to the operator and the public.

If that one-sided "union drive" were to persist, the valley would inevitably lose most of its full-service dining spots, and organized labor would therefore also lose out. That seems a high price to pay, no matter whose side you're on.

The week in retrospect

School's fiscal cloud

The Amador and Pleasanton school districts have just completed their initial "season" of salary and negotiation sessions with legal counsel taking a primary role.

If any bruised feelings have resulted, whether it be in the board, administration, teacher or teacher negotiator ranks, no one is telling.

This bodes well since the meet and confer process next spring is likely to be held under a yet darker fiscal cloud... unless the boys in Sacramento get out of the committee room and into full glare of the public and California Teachers Association searchlight.

Our legislative representatives have a penchant for coming out front with slickly authored bills to aid various populations within the total school community, and then cutting and splicing them to death in the committee inter-sanctum....far from the maddening public.

Earlier this week an article authored by Assemblyman Floyd Mori, and appearing on this page, detailed the various and sundry backgrounds of legislators in Sacramento. Other than Mori, who is a Chabot Collegeeconomics instructor, the list of teachers was pretty sparse. In fact, we don't recall seeing or knowing of any ex-elementary teachers now in the ranks of legislators.

We specify elementary teacher as opposed to high school or college administrator because the critical need for funding is in the lower grades. Hence, we need more support in Sacramento from people who understand where the priority should be.

And since approximately 85 per cent of school district budgets are "locked" into salaries and benefits for district employees, we need legislators who will not wilt under the pressure applied by teacher lobbies to the detriment of that remaining 15 per cent.

Almost without exception, school districts in this state are faced with cutting costs within the non-salary and benefits percentage.

It is at least equally difficult to reduce personnel costs in an equitable manner with due consideration for maintenance of an effective educational program, ethnic balance, employee seniority, etc. The type of direct personnel action which embraces the concept of "two weeks notice" is more typical of the private sector and might be less than palatable if legalized and used in the public sector.

And now another factor is beginning to emerge, one that legislators will have to increasingly take into consideration when reviewing the thousand-and-one demands for more funding. That is declining enrollment in our schools.

While this is not a substantial factor as regards Livermore, Pleasanton, Dublin and San Ramon school districts, it may yet envelop all, especially if the so-called "no growth" and regional government interests gain a foothold.

Last August, testimony related to the negative impact of declining enrollments and potential remedial measures was presented by an advisory body to the State Board of Education. The testimony stressed the need for continued funding at pre-declining enrollment levels and emphasized the difficulties encountered by school boards in attempting to reduce costs in proportion to revenue losses.....in the face of constraints contained in current law.

So what we really need then, before we press for faster and more enlightened action by our legislators, is a more involved citizenry. We all can stand as a potential balance to pressure groups or foot-dragging lawmakers who would bow to inordinate salary demands, cutting of program funding or, worse, be unable or unwilling to get off dead center.

round the town

It reminded me of that little matter involving "Jim Dandy" ... in the days of my misguided youth .. in the rugged climes of Moose Jaw, the place where it all began.

His proper appelation was "James Dandridge." He was a very proper sort of boy, if you know what I mean. Dressed to the knees in knickers. Full length socks. Buttoned shoes. A picture of sartorial splendor, Saskatchewan style.

What was particularly different about James, however, was that his mother sent him to dancing lessons! It was the one item about his life which we could not stomach. And "Jim Dandy" was the lowest of the low, in our grammar school standard for survival.

It was therefore inevitable that the East End bullies would one day decide to subject Jim to the worst possible humiliation ... they would force him into fisticuffs with yours truly.

Now, you have to understand that — at five foot ten and 115 pounds — I wasn't exactly a paragon of physical prowess at that stage of my life. Energetic, yes; Charles Atlas, never! That is why the suggestion of combat involving myself and "Jim Dandy" was the ultimate shame ... for Jim. Worse, there was no question that this bean pole would trounce James Dandridge, for after all ... "HE takes dancing lessons!"

Well, to make a somewhat sordid story mercifully brief, the fight came off, Jim beat the bejabbers out of me, and to top it off, took on two of my pushers in successive order, with similiar results.

To this day, I have never doubted the physical abilities of a dancer, male or female, until I have a clear understanding of their training program, and precisely what kind of "dancing" it is that they train for.

All of this came to mind the other night as the little woman and I watched the Bolshoi Ballet in considerable action at the San Francisco War Memorial Opera House. Let me assure you, those Ruskie dancers are not to be toyed with. They are some kind of rugged people.

Ballet has never been my kind of thing. (I am at least true to THAT tenet of my Moose Jaw upbringing.) Reggie Jackson powering one over the right field bleachers ... Ken Stabler scrambling for ten tough yards. Those are my idea of rugged individualism. But I would put Yuri Vladimirov against R. Jackson in wrist wrestling any day of the week, and give odds on Yuri. Need five yards in a hurry? ... send in Vyacheslav Gordeyev and he will pick that up in one leap, with a yard or two to spare.

Come to think of it, even Nina Sorokina would get you seven yards with one flyer, providing Yuri was on the other side of the line to catch her. Which is exactly what they did on stage at the War Memorial. She would twirl herself back into a far corner of the big stage. Yuri would be standing nonchalantly in the other corner.

Suddenly, Nina goes into a full trot, on tip toes. Fifteen feet short of Yuri she takes off. Flying flat out. A 90-pound human arrow in horizontal flight. If Yuri hadn't timed his catch just right, Nina would have wound up somewhere between the orchestra pit and the second row of seats. John Brodie at his very best never gained five yards over right tackle like that!

Defying gravity is not the whole Bolshoi scene, of course. Sometimes the girls just spin, in one spot, on one toe, for a dozen revolutions or so. When the men aren't otherwise occupied, they are likely found six feet off the stage floor, rising like a rocket, but coming back down like a feather. It is incomprehensible to this prairie kid that a 190-pound man can return to earth without making so much as a flutter of sound.

Pyotr Ilitch Tchaikovsky has always been one of my favorites in the "heavy music" department, mostly because his stirring strings and thundering drums remind me of my emerging years with the East End gang. But until you have seen a man and a woman do their pas de deux to the music of Tchaikovsky, you have not known what that musical genius really had in mind.

It is to watch a concert violin in flight, to see a bass drum thunder across the stage, to follow the notes of the flute as they slip from hand to hand like butterflies on the wing. It is, as others have said, the poetry of music unfolding before your eyes.

The Bolshoi Ballet is not the only troupe of its kind in the world. It is not even the only one the Russians export for our entertainment, from the several thousand talented and energetic young people who aspire to nothing less than their nation's highest honor ... to dance with the Bolshoi or the Ballet Russe.

And lest you think this to be sissy work for a bunch of rugged men, I suggest you first check out Vladimir Vasiliev as he spins Natalia Bessmertnova in mid air, on one outstretched arm. It can build a man a mighty set of muscles in short order. Which is, I suspect, how James Dandridge developed that tremendous right hand. Wish somebody had tipped me off about that before I got so reckless.

Kallam's comment...

Legalize and tax pot

The California legislature has finally struck a blow for sanity.

Their decriminalization of marijuana possession and use (for small amounts at least) is a long overdue recognition of the fact that millions of people indulge in an occasional puff of cannabis sativa and that millions more don't really care about the use of pot.

However, the legislators were too timid.

My support of the complete legalization of marijuana use (with controls similar to alcohol) is based on financial rather than philosophical grounds.

Any law must be enforced. That enforcement takes the time of policemen and costs money. I think most people would agree that catching vandals, thieves and muggers is more important than pursuing large scale carriers of marijuana.

After all, since the use of marijuana will soon be on a par with a traffic ticket, why should we, the taxpayers, devote millions of dollars to keep people from getting what amounts to a traffic ticket?

But the foregoing is not the real way to make marijuana legalization serve the people.

We should, as is done with alcohol, tax it to death.

The cost of making alcohol is minimal. The cost of buying it is large. The reasons are taxes, both state and federal, and every drink in California takes some of the heavy load off the taxpayer.

There is no reason marijuana should not be treated in the same way.

The benefits are obvious. The state coffers would be filled, the police could spend their time pursuing actual criminals and the underworld would be denied another source of revenue.

The benefits to marijuana consumers would also be great.

Rather than relying on some scruffy dealer's word that "this stuff is straight from Columbia", marijuana would be packaged, labeled and sold across the counter in clearly marked packages.

In a time when consumerism and fiscal restraint are bywords, it seems to me that legalization of marijuana is one issue that would appeal to supporters of both causes.

Judge Gale's service

One valley tradition will end, and another will begin on Monday afternoon when Judge William H. Gale, Jr. steps up to the Municipal Court for the Livermore-Pleasanton Judicial District. But as much as that move might impact the judicial system in these two townships, there will be a somewhat more startling change within the ranks of private law practice within these several communities.

Since the first year of this century there has been a member of the Gale family rendering legal service to the local populace. Charles Gale began that cycle when he opened offices here in 1901. Elected Justice of the Peace for Pleasanton Township in 1932, he started a new "Gale tradition" which extended by his nephew, Judge William Gale, and that now enters its 44th year with this new stint on the Livermore municipal bench.

It is to the private practice which most valley residents identify, however, and that is a story unto itself. Three generations of Gale-Harris families have served that profession, and the family tree is traced to the name of Bernal, one of the earliest of this valley's settlers.

The women have been very much a part of that story too, and it is through them that Judge Bill Gale and his progeny write a valley chapter that encompasses five generations, and that has the seed for even more pages.

The professional side of Bill Gale's story is by now well known — admitted to the bar in 1941, almost four years in the military service interspersed with two years with the Alameda County District Attorney's office. He brought his family to Pleasanton in 1947 to establish his first private practice, served as city attorney for four years, and was elected Judge of the Pleasanton Judicial District in 1953.

William Gale, Jr. will be best remembered for his sensitivity to this rural scene, the rights of ranchers and old-time landowers. The law office which he shared with his uncle, and that, until today, he shared in turn with two young members of that profession, has been a bastion of defense for the rights and needs of countless thousands of valley citizens.

That practice now passes to a new team — Amaral and Walker, Attorneys at Law. It is fitting perhaps that LeRoy Amaral is a second generation Pleasantonite, while Hugh Walker traces his Livermore origins back before the turn of the century. And there is the further promise from Judge Gale that "I will return to private practice some day."

That is a pledge many will hold him to, even as they wish him well in his new career of public service.

Letters to the editor

Women's rights

Editor, The Times:
I am somewhat amused by the few letters you have received by WOMEN who are opposed and obviously quite frightened by the possible passage of the ERA. I find it difficult to understand why these women prefer to remain legal second-class citizens, or "Daddy's Little Girls."

If they prefer to have their husbands take care of all matters in their home, they will be allowed to continue this childlike arrangement. I just hope that their husbands are never unemployed or disabled. I also hope that their husbands out live them (which is statistically not likely), and I hope that they are never divorced or deserted. As Johnnie Tillman of NOW stated: "Every woman is one man away from welfare."

Forty-seven percent of all females in California over the age of 35 are widowed, divorced, separated, or unmarried. Now these 47% are entitled to equal rights under the law as they go about their business of fully supporting themselves and their children.

I don't think any American should have to be afraid of a real democracy or an amendment which would help form a more perfect union, establish real justice, help insure domestic tranquility, promote the general welfare, and allow ALL citizens their own pursuit of happiness.

For those who still might be afraid of a true democracy, they may write to Common Cause, 2100 M Street, N.W. Washing, D.C. 20037 for a free pamphlet entitled: "Equality of Rights Shall not be Abridged ... On Account of Sex."

Adult Ed Class boosted

Editor, The Times:
I wish to take this opportunity to express my gratitude for the excellent news coverage your paper provided our adult education classes. Your efforts throughout the school year informing the community was of great benefit to us.

Special thanks go to Al Fischer. His understanding and willingness to help contributed greatly to our increased enrollment. Without the assistance of Al and your paper, we couldn't offer the adults of this area the program we do.

Again, many thanks for a job well done.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

Kiwi the cat said farewell in his own inimitable manner. He is a wilfull feline with a mind of his own.

When I loaded Max into the car for the ride to the kennel, Kiwi came out separately. I knew he would protest.

Kiwi believes automobiles are made for sleeping. He basks on their hoods in winter sunlight. Slumbers in the deep shade beneath them come summer.

Riding, except in the arms of a human, is for idiots if you will ask that cat.

When I put him in the back seat he hopped out before I could close the door and hid before I knew he was gone.

I drove over Old Ranch Road to Dougherty and then back through the brown hills to Tassajara.

Simpson's school for dogs is deep in the boondocks, a far piece from anywhere and legally in Danville.

Actually it seems to be closer to Brentwood than anywhere else. The hawks out there are so big they could fight Golden Eagles with a switch.

Max never attended Simpson's. He couldn't pass the entrance examination. They can teach dogs anything at that boarding school, but they could not teach Max to stop eating his water bucket.

The cattery is down the street about a block. I opened the door and Max tried to get out.

Kiwi is his best friend and sometimes he gets confused about who is a dog and who a cat. A little like Sam the rabbit.

Kiwi didn't get out. The reason he did not was because he was not in the car.

I left Max at Simpsons.(They let him stay there and audit a few classes but they won't give him a grade. A dog can hardly expect to enter college when he never graduated from the eighth grade)

Back through the sunbaked hills and twisting back roads to San Ramon. A short drive when a man is not in a hurry. Endless when he is.

I looked for Kiwi's body on the way back. Could he have jumped out of the car when it was in motion without my noticing?

I thought he might just make the leap. Kiwi is capable of anything.

When I called the cat at home he did not answer. Nor was he anywhere in sight when I circled the house.

A poor fellow wonders what to do in a case like that. Postpone my journey to Phoenix. Cancel my camera date with all those fish in Mismaloya, some five miles south of Porto Vallarta?

When I had almost loaded the car he called me. The little fellow was sitting in the back yard munching on a strawberry.

Kiwi, little Black Max and the birds eat the strawberries at our place. We have had one basket all season.

The cat wanted to play tag when I tried to pick him up. He hid under the bushes. Then he sank his teeth into my hand when I picked him from his lair.

Folks who visit our house are inclined to be a trifle afraid of Max. Boxer dogs sometimes look formidable to those who do not know them.

Kiwi the cat is the menace.

He sat on my lap and squirmed on the way back to the kennel, caterwauling loud protests and no pun intended.

Try driving a reluctant Volkswagen through those hills and valleys , my friends, with a squirming cat on your lap. Believe me it is an experience a man would not want twice.

I stopped at the cat house and wiped the blood from my hand.

"Get thee to a cattery," I told Kiwi. He got, but not without a protest. For a pint sized bundle of fur scarcely two years old he has picked up quite a feline vocabulary. Veteran toms of Herculean proportions could take lessons from him.

He sat in his tiny kennel and swore at the lady who owned his mansion.

"What kind of a hotel is this?" he demanded. "There isn't even fresh linen in the bathroom.

"He'll have a nice, big room by himself tomorrow," the lady told me. "It isn't quite ready, but he'll be all right. I don't like to leave them in tiny quarters."

"Where are the girls?" Kiwi demanded. Kiwi has no need for the girls. He is a pansy cat, but he does not know his plumbing has been rerouted.

Day after day I see him running across the lawn with a big tom in hot pursuit.

Kiwi has a surprise for them. He runs into the back yard and hides under Max's legs. Using that strategy he has yet to lose a battle, let alone a war.

He is no great shakes with the ladies. They take one look at him and say, "Take off junior. We don't need your type at this soiree." Nevertheless he keeps trying. A dedicated, pint sized tom who is all heart but sadly lacking in other areas.

He was still swearing when I left an hour later than I had intended, an hour late for work when I HAD to leave early.

Hughes Air West is waiting in Oakland with a big iron bird. They will take me to far away Phoenix, then on to the Oceano Hotel which is just five miles north of Los Arcos where moray eel wait in their damp caves and parrot fish feed on rose shaped coral.

Hasta luego, senores . I'll be back for Kiwi and Max in a couple of weeks.

For Sunday, June 29, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will make several requests to no avail for something you'll want done today. Eventually, you'll do it yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't lean too heavily on friends for donations to your pet charity today. Their money may be earmarked for something more personal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) People you'll mix with today are not necessarily interested in the same goals you are. Don't harp on your aims.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You've foolishly convinced yourself that something can't be done on your own. Not so! You'll do it better alone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll have to take a more direct approach regarding a delicate matter that you're trying to settle with a friend. Be firm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're too indecesive today over small issues. Your behavior will cause some annoyance. Go along with the group.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You have a tendency today to put things off till the very last minute. This will upset your schedule, and someone else's as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be careful when talking to a friend today that your questions don't probe too deeply. He's sensitive about a certain matter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll accomplish more at home today if you first set the example you want the family to follow, rather than merely admonishing them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) For a task you'll attempt today, your first ideas won't be your best. Sound them out on someone who has faced a similar problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be a wise shopper today. Don't buy anything new without first looking around to see if you can get the same item used, in good condition, at a better price.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're apt to be a bit restless and moody if you're too much of a homebody today. Pack the family in the car and go somehwere!

Your Birthday

June 29, 1975

A distant place you've always wanted to visit may be on your agenda this year. Knowledge as well as enjoyment will be gained from this experience.

Wolves top Gaels in summer cage, 42-33

San Ramon High's strongly veteran basketball team wove a fourth-quarter defensive web around young Dublin last week for a 42-33 win in the Allied Brokers Summer Basketball League at Amador Valley High.

The Wolves led by four points heading into the final period of play, then preceeded to check the Gaels on four points. It was the third quarter in which Dublin failed to score in double figures.

Returning varsity veteran Brad Blake paced San Ramon with 14 points, all from the field. Randy Harrington scored eight, and Jeff Herrmann and Mark Hutchinson added six apiece.

Dublin was paced by a couple of junior varsity graduates, Jerry Puertas and Rich Barns, both with eight points.

In the only other contest, College Park the three-year old record for scoring in a Pleasanton Recreation Department summer contest, blasting California, 97-42.

Tony rolls 907 4-game series

Tony Politz returned to summer league bowling after a short layoff with a 907 four-game series at Granada Bowl last week.

Politz, who rolled a 269 game with 10 strikes, posted his first 700 series in 10 years.

Gail Brabec reached the 800 plateu for the first time with an 820.

Jerry Puertas posted a 622 series with a 233 high game. Puertas carries a 174 average.

Grutman hurlers throttle Phils, 5-1

Grutman's ran out a trio of outstanding pitchers in the opener of the Pleasanton National senior league playoffs, and the result was a 5-1 win over the Pleasanton Jaycee Phillies.

Winner Pat Geck, and relief pitchers Scott Wise and David Hegger checked the Phils on two base hits.They shut out the losers until the top of the fifth inning.

By that time, Grutman's held a 5-0 lead.

Ken Northam's solo home run, and a two-run single by Wise were the keys to Grutman's offense.

Losing pitcher Glenn Hill threw a four-hitter.

In the major league Eastern Division playoff, the Covey's Mobil Braves defeated Amador Linen, 10-9.

The Braves trailed, 6-0 in the second inning, but scored seven times in the top of the third to launch their comeback.

Mark Kammermeier drove in two runs for the winners with a single and double.

Giants Jeff Castillo and Scott Reynolds both had two RBI's.

For the Braves, Larry Rodgers went 3-for-4 with a double.

Bruce's Drywall won the Triple A championship with a 16-8 clubbing of Tri-Valley Heating. Randy Verboon had three hits in three trips to the plate for the winners. Steve Ferolito and Mike Nostrand each had two hits. Peter Leaf and Keith Wolchow made fine catches.

In the second game of the Double A championship series, the Dodgers won 2-1, when Jack Murphy stole home in the second inning for the deciding run. Jeff Pappas and Jeff Wilson pitched a two-hitter for the Dodgers. David Irish hit a solo home run to start the second inning rally. Steve Rocereto doubled home the Pirates' run.

Will Hayes opened with three strong innings on the hill as the Pirates defeated the Phillies, 16-7, and evened the Single A title series at a game apiece. Hayes also had three hits for the winners including two doubles and a triple. Danny McPherson and Jim Soshnik each had two hits. For the Phils, Steve Beck and Jim Garrett had three hits each.

Livermore National

Kevin Wallace closed out the Livermore National minor league season as the home run king last week, after clouting his sixth round-tripper in a 13-8 K&L Interior victory over A&W Root Beer.

Wallace, who also doubled, finished the game with four RBI's.

Fran Dobias singled three times and drove in four runs for the losers. David Cornell went 3-for-3 and drove in three runs.

In the major leagues, C.Ridolfi defeated Palomart, 8-3. Frank Bamford led the charge with 4-for-4, including a double. Rich Mansfield had three hits and three RBI's. Palomart's Mike McCarn had two hits.

Lox Equipment cinched the Livermore senior league championship Tuesday with a 12-6 victory over the Geldertowners. The team will represent Livermore American in the Senior League Tournament of Champions beginning Monday.

Mike Brann and Rick Finkes both collected two hits for the winners. Finkes doubled and drove in a run. Teammate Stuart Lawson tripled.

Jeff Jones doubled home three runs for the losers, and Dean Mendez singled and doubled and had two runs-batted-in.

Winning pitcher Steve Kramer fired a three-hitter with 12 strikeouts.

In the major leagues, C. Ridolfi Painting scored 12 times in the first inning to throttle Emperor's Garden, 21-3. Rich Mansfield spiced the Ridolfi offense with three hits, including a home run, and six RBI's. George Yavornisky doubled twice and knocked in two runs. Greg Manchester singled home two runs. Glenn Kersey tripled.

Jerry Bacon singled and doubled for the losers, and Matt Norman played well. John Dalrymple was the winning pitcher.

Mike McCarn's four-hit pitching helped Palomart close out the Livermore National major league season with a 5-1 victory over Country Market.

McCarn shut out the Marketers until the bottom of the sixth inning. Then he gave up a solo home run to Kevin Grijalva.

Steve Perry paced Palomart with two singles and three runs-batted-in. He had two hits. Wade Wanden and Jeff York also drove in runs.

Livermore American

John Gatrousis and Bill Magann combined for a three-hitter in the Livermore American minor league as the Y's Men defeated Der Wienerschnitzel, 12-2.

Ed Governor singled four times in four trips to the plate for the winners. Gatrousis and Pat Timmer both went 2-for-4. Gatrousis tripled.

Weiner's Greg Lupo belted a solo home run.

Lobos annihilate Pumas in Softball

Lobos 22, Pumas 1
Winning pitcher Nancy Riley went the distance, striking out eight, walking none. She was aided by Tari Tarabini's grand slam home run, and a homer by Tracy Miller. Lyn Duerson went 5-for-5, while Sara Ellis and Jenny Fisch were 3-for-3. Puma Colleen Cleary made a fine catch at third, and Brenda Park tripled.

Sharks 25, Colts 13
Winning pitcher was Gina Belforte. She benefited by a fine catch at second base by Kim Park, who threw on to first for a double play. Shortstop Noreen Dimaggio and Cindy Smith combined on another double play. A home run by Lisa Mandley and Sue Skinner's three hits powered the offense. Dimaggio had three hits, and Brynn Burns, had five. Laurie Gonzales and Diana Foster each had three hits.

Chicks 16, Roadrunners 4
A pair of Chick hurlers, Marcie Smith and Jodi Catala, combined for six strikeouts. Smith singled three times. Patricia Dulick, P.J. Moore, Laura Souza, Smith and Catala were all involved in double plays. Losing pitcher Barbara Huddleston singled three times. Carol Wallace had two hits.

Crocodiles 26, Eagles 13
Fielding stars included Julie Lippold, Mary VonHoomisen, Sue Briggs and Sherrie Jankiewicz. Laura Anthony crashed a triple.

Andrea Clark was 3-for-4 with a triple. Cougar Cheryl Astorino had two hits, as did Denise Dickie and Cheryl Kane. Gaylene Larkin and Shelley Reposa tripled.

Chicks 23, Crocodiles 1
Winning pitcher Jodi Catala fired a two-hitter. Patricia Dulick crashed a grand slam and singled twice P.J. Moore collected four hits, and Marcie Smith, three. In the fourth inning, Stacy Murphy homered for the Crocodile hit. Marianne McCoy, Wendy Merrick and Liza Parrish teammed up for a Crocodile double play.

Hawks 14, Cougars 12
Defense by Mary Calhoun, Roni Davi, Katie Osborn and Andrea Clark, plus Lisa Sumner's pitching beat the Cougars. Losing pitcher Michele Cavett struck out nine in seven innings. Denise Dickie had three hits.

Mustangs 23, Pumas 4
Hard hitting Tammi Bruce hit a grand slam, a triple and four singles. Winning pitcher was Jill Teplin. Colleen Cleary and Michelle Skinner had three hits each for the Pumas.

Roadrunners 27, Eagles 9
Winning pitcher Barbara Huddleston aided her own cause by smacking a triple. Huddleston, Cindy Williams and Carol Wallace combined for a double play. Eagles Sherrie Jankiewicz, Lisa Overfield and Kris Cooper fielded their positions well.

Tigers 9, Panthers 7
Shelly Dohnt had three hits and three RBI's. Lisa Radosevic singled twice and turned a double play.

Broncos 30, Mustangs 10
This game snapped a two-game Bronco loss streak. Elizabeth Biatek collected her first two hits of the year. Sue Franc had four hits. Cheri Lewis played well at first base, and Helen Hirsch pitched two perfect innings.

Colts 16, Mavericks 15
First victory for the Colts. Losing pitcher Susan Sutton had three hits as did Kelly Dykes and Barbara Elvidge.

Crocodiles 10, Sharks 9
Marianne McCoy's two-run single in the bottom of the ninth inning won the game. A two-run single by Wendy Merrick was a key blow in the fifth inning. Judy Merrick doubled and tripled. Shark pitcher Noreen DiMaggio struck out 10. Cindy Smith singled and tripled.

Crocodiles 10, Colts 8
Winning pitcher was Marianne McCoy. Judy Merrick tripled and Linda Silva and Margaret Cockerton doubled. Colt Kathy Swain doubled with the bases loaded. Laura Larin had four singles, and Kay Goodnight, three. Cheryl Ruhl and Kris Henry made fine outfield catches.

Pintos 16, Eagles 10
The Pintos' Kathy Callaghan went 4-for-5 with four RBI's. Laura Fend and Margaret Hirsch each had two singles. For the Eagles, Lisa Anthony singled three times and doubled once. Katie Morton and Sherrie Jankewicz played well in the field.

Cougars 3, Gazelles 0
Outstanding pitching by Michelle Cavett won the game. She struck out four and gave up only four hits. She walked one. Susie Pola helped out with fine defense at second base Barbara Silbernagel lashed out two hits. Colleen Goodnight had two of the Gazelle hits.

Rams 15, Wildcats 12
Doubles by Melinda Nicholson, Tracy Timms and Kristin McMasters paced the Rams. Karen Abramson and Tracy Hurlow tripled for the Wildcats.

Hawks 8, Pumas 6
Pitchers Mary Calhoun and Dana Petrie shared the duties for the Hawks. Andrea Clark's grand slam aided the cause, as did Yvette Bancherо's three RBI's Puma pitchers were Cathy Marin and Karen Wilkens. Angela Kobold played well in the field.

Great Danes 11, Fillies 5
Winning pitcher was Gayle Park. Jennifer Statler turned a double play Terri Harrelson doubled and singled. Angela Partlow and Karen Miller pitched for the Fillies. Connie Garrison doubled three.

Chicks 6, Cheetahs 5
A seventh inning bunt by P.J. Moore fetched the winning run. She had two singles, along with Marcie Smith. Smith and Jodi Catala pitched. Debbie Lloyd tripled home two Cheetah runs. Chris Brandes doubled. Linda Little made a fine catch of a line drive.

Sports in brief

Monarchs in tough

The Livermore Monarchs play their second-to-last home match in the under-21 Cal Am Soccer Tournament Sunday at Emma C. Smith School, 4 p.m.

The Monarchs face a San Francisco team that could be the toughest of the tournament field, according to Livermore coach Mike Payne.

DV net victory

In one of the tightest of the opening week Jr. Davis Cup tennis matches last week, Del Valle Tennis Club of Livermore defeated Pleasanton, 6-3.

The Livermore team swept the three doubles competitions for its margin of victory.

Pleasanton's number one singles, Scott Perry, defeated Todd Madrid, 6-4, 6-2.

Del Valle doubles victories went to Madrid and Andy West, Mike and David Slack, and Mike Mitchell and Francis Neri.

Del Valle 6, Pleasanton 3

District wrapup

The District 57 senior league baseball tournament begins Monday at sites from Danville to Newark.

The double elimination tournament culminates Saturday with the championship contest on the Mission San Jose field.

Monday, the Livermore American senior league champs will face the Dublin titleists at Monte Vista High School.

The Livermore National and Centerville National leagues will play at Dublin, while Pleasanton National meets Newark American at Newark. All contests begin at 5:45 p.m.

Dialing for $

Although the proverbial wolf has been baying at its door, the financially unsound Western Basketball Association has so far been unable to find a solution to its precarious situation.

Two schedulee league meetings have been postponed during the past week.

"We just can't seem to get everyone together," said league president George Putnam, player-owner of the Sacramento Prospectors. "Everyone" being representatives of the five teams, including Pleasanton's Tri-Valley Warriors, and commissioner Bill Helbush.

The long-awaited and much needed (in the wake of a recent snub by the National Basketball Association, which the WBA had hoped would offer assistance) conference has been delayed until sometime next week in Oakland.

Discussion is expected to center around what form the league will take next year without help from the major league. Another topic could be the expected move of the Martinez Muirs, the league's last reamining original franchise, to the Richmond Auditorium.

The Muirs, who drew less as a pro club than they had as an AAU entry, were forced to cancel several games last season when an arson fire destroyed their home court at Alhambra High School.

BART fares going up: Parking fees approved

By JOHN VANLANDINGHAM
Lesher News Bureau

OAKLAND — A fare increase and parking fees have been ordered to support the Bay Area Rapid Transit District's $63 million budget, adopted Thursday.

Following Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post's recommendations to the exact number, the directors whittled away some $6 million and any chance that night service would begin during the 1975-76 fiscal year.

Then they slapped on a hiring freeze that went beyond adding new positions, but froze those positions authorized but not yet filled.

The vote on the budget was 6-3, with Contra Costa Director Nello Bianco of Richmond joining Directors John Glenn of Oakland and Robert Allen of Livermore in dissenting.

Bianco split with fellow Director James Hill of Walnut Creek on the issues of the fare increase and parking fees.

Both are to become effective Nov. 6, after a 30-day review period and 90-day implementation period.

The fare hike will boost the cost of a one-way trip between Concord and San Francisco from $1.25 to $1.55, but the minimum fare will remain at 30 cents, as Post had recommended.

Parking will cost 50 cents in those lots that are now at capacity and 25 cents for all the others, again as recommended by Post.

Bianco and Glenn complained that the parking fees meant Contra Costa would be financing the deficit, along with Alameda County, because San Francisco County has no parking lots.

Director John Kirkwood of San Francisco, who moved to adopt the fare increase and parking fees, responded that San Francisco supports a $10 million bus system and was also assessed for the capital construction costs when the parking lots were built in Contra Costa and Alameda Counties.

Kirkwood also moved to prevent the start of night services, noting that the district could neither afford nor physically deliver such service.

The hiring freeze, proposed by Director Elmer B. Cooper, of San Francisco, followed an earlier plea by representatives of the district's Latin Affirmative Action Council for increasing Latino hirings.

However, Cooper did depart from his own dictum later in the meeting when he recommended adding 20 people to the rolling stock shop, a move that will cost about $550,000, he said.

It took a San Mateo man to add the ironic twist to the public hearing that had drawn a large crowd of newsmen, district employes and corporate types.

The man identified himself as a resident of San Mateo, which is not in the district, and stated his opposition to reduced fares for senior citizens.

He was the only speaker during the public portion of the hearing.

During the discussion of the increased fares, Hill, a Walnut Creek attorney of some affluence, noted that he represented a large number of the Contra Costa residents, all quite affluent.

He went on to state that he had previously welcomed rate increases, adding that his constituents must favor it since they elected him.

"If they aren't satisfied, then they can get their chance to show it at the next election in November 1976," he said.

Among the budget cuts approved Thursday were:

— Deleted $36,633 from the general manager's budget.

— Deleted $28,200 proposed to be paid by BART to various banks.

— Reduced the materiel allowance by $75,000.

— Deleted $150,000 from the real estate department budget.

— Deleted $85,464 from the insurance department budget.

— Deleted $32,000 from common expenses for two luxury cars and a lobbyist.

— Funded the employe relations manager and secretary for three months only, after which the money will be transferred to the affirmative action department which has been given three months to devise an "appropriate" format.

— Reduced the market research budget by $89,050.

— Kept the police budget at last year's $2,036,519 level.

— Reduced personnel costs by $1,195,000.

March of Dimes Launches New Research Program

by Samuel J. Ajl, Ph.D.
Vice President for Research
The National Foundation-March of Dimes

THROAT CULTURE determines whether congenitally infected infant is excreting CMV. Checking blood antibody levels is another means of diagnosing this chronic viral infection.

Bringing the front lines of the war against birth defects into patient care clinics is the aim of a new research support program of The National Foundation-March of Dimes.

Birth defects research involves some of today's most rapidly changing frontiers in biology, such as biochemical genetics, cell biology, brain metabolism, and complex interactions within the immune system.

The new March of Dimes Clinical Research grants fill a logical position between our General Research and Medical Service Programs by speeding up delivery of advanced, creative concepts in biology to patients affected by, or at risk for, birth defects.

The program, which began last April, provides $599,531 to support the work of 27 physician-investigators with special qualifications in both basic science and patient care.

New Drug

An example is pediatric endocrinologist Kenneth H. Gabbay, M.D., of Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston. He is investigating the possible role of sugar-alcohols in the unexplained eye, kidney, nerve, and blood vessel damage which affects many diabetics despite good medical control of blood sugar levels with insulin.

Dr. Gabbay will also test a new drug which blocks sugar-alcohol formation without harmful side effects in animals. He hopes the drug will prevent the long-term degenerative effects of juvenile diabetes and another disorder of sugar metabolism, galactosemia.

Subtle Damage

Dr. Charles A. Alford Jr., microbiologist and pediatrician at the University of Alabama in Birmingham, is conducting a long-term study of children congenitally infected with cytomegalovirus, or CMV, found in 5 to 10 per cent of newborn babies. Most infected children appear normal, but there is evidence that CMV does subtle damage to the brain, sense organs, and immune system. Infection often persists for months or years, and only long-term study can reveal its effects and the need for effective action to prevent it.

At Creighton University in Omaha, Dr. J. Kenneth Herd will test the safety and effectiveness of hyaluronidase, an enzyme which breaks down complex sugars called mucopolysaccharides, for treatment of a group of diseases caused by a build-up of MPS in various organs. The disorders lead to severe eye, heart, and brain damage which Dr. Herd hopes can be halted or reversed by enzyme treatment.

Birth defects exact a formidable cost from society as a whole in unproductive lives, medical and institutional expenses, and human suffering.

By relating research to patient treatment we believe we can hasten the pace, often agonizingly slow, at which mankind is approaching a day when every infant's birthright includes a whole mind in a healthy body.

BUILDING BETTER INFANT HEALTH CARE

Physicians and other health professionals are refining skills that offer families greater hope for their cherished goal of a healthy baby. The National Foundation-March of Dimes supports medical service and research programs that strengthen these efforts.

MS. JOAN MARKS directs a college program that trains health professionals in human genetics.

DR. SAMUEL AJL explains expanding research into causes of birth defects.

DR. SHYAN C. SUN describes the life-saving steps taken in intensive care nurseries.

DR. MITZI L. DUXBURY discusses the nurse's new role in helping parents of a desperately ill newborn.

DR. MARY AMPOLA tells how she treated a baby even before it was born.

Temperature changes

Ocean is energy source

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Temperature differences in ocean water could spin the turbines of floating power stations to help meet America's energy needs, a research company says.

It's a "something-for-nothing" idea, since the energy is already there: heat from the sun held in the oceans' waters.

By the year 2000, said Art Griffin of TRW Systems Inc., ocean energy could provide some 6 per cent of the country's total need. And the process could also be used to make ammonia, an important component of fertilizer which is getting increasingly scarcer.

The idea is nearly a century old, but not until recently did it seem possible to extract ocean power at a cost comparable to conventional generating methods, says Griffin.

Now, the concept is being studied by three teams of researchers: the TRW-led team; one at the University of Massachusetts and one at Carnegie-Mellon University.

Their proposals will be considered by the Energy Research Development Administration, which is looking for alternative sources of energy such as solar, geothermal and ocean power. Then perhaps the go-ahead will be given to build a test project.

As TRW conceives them, the power stations would be 17-story concrete cylinders, wide as a football field, floating with more than half their height underwater.

Pumps would take in surface water, which might be as warm as 80 degrees in semi-tropical areas, as well as colder water from 4,000 feet or so below the surface.

The latter, as much as 45 degrees colder than at the surface, would be pumped up through a large plastic tube like a giant drinking-straw.

The hot and cold water would be used to alternately heat and cool ammonia circulated continuously through a system of pipes.

As it was heated and compressed, the ammonia would turn into a gas, like steam, which would spin turbine wheels to generate power.

"All you pay for is the equipment." That would be expensive at first; it would cost about $210 million to build a prototype station to churn out 100 megawatts.

But once in production, he said, the expense could likely be brought down to about $1,000 per megawatt, which "compares very favorably with conventional plants," he said.

One factor in placing the plants is that they must be located where the temperature difference — or vertical temperature gradient, as it is known to scientists — is at least 39 degrees.

Some places under consideration are the Gulf of Mexico, the Caribbean and off the southwest coast of Mexico.

Getting the power from the station to where it is needed is still being studied. Cables could take the electricity to shore.

Public quiz forecasts end of federal taxes

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1985, federal taxes will be outlawed and smoking banned.

The elderly no longer will be shuttled off to nursing institutions but will be cared for at home; mandatory retirement will be moved down to age 50 in order to provide more jobs; and, to help curb population growth, perspective parents will have to apply for permits.

These are not the ramblings of an ambitious social scientist or an avant garde politician. They are goals some average citizens would like to see become realities in the near future.

As part of a promotion for a new book by Alvin Toffler, author of "Future Shock," 45 radio talk shows around the country were asked to have their listeners call in their predictions of newspaper headlines for next year and for 10 years from now.

Alan Christian of WBAL in Baltimore, Md., said during the three hours his show was broadcast, about 45 people called in offering headlines.

"People are interested in new ideas," he said. "Like moving cities underground and reclaiming the surface for agricultural purposes, or putting cities in orbit around the earth and doing the same thing."

Among 1976 headlines predicted: "California falls into sea," "Ford proposes $1.5 billion relief for Israeli refugees," "Nixon turns down Cabinet post to remain ambassador to China," and "U.S. makes contact with UFO's."

For 1985, listeners said: "Public schools abolished — competitive systems replace them," "Smog and Air Pollution abolished," "Moratorium on technology" and "Unemployment in U.S. falls below 2 per cent."

Soapy salvation earns millions for organizer

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — The Billy Graham of the soap set brought his traveling salvation show to Saginaw recently. There were suds, brothers and sisters, and there was religion.

Richard DeVos and about 20 disciples arrived from Ada, Mich., in a huge, brown "Executive Coach." What the scrubbed-faced Michigander had to say to the 2,500 persons in Saginaw was simple:

"C'mon, friend, make a better life for yourself. We'll show you how."

DeVos is no ordinary soap salesman, nor was his rally the usual fist-thumping appeal to the soul.

He and his partner, Jay Van Andel, own and manage the Amway Corp., a firm based in Ada. It is well known, especially in the Midwest, for home and personal care products, all home delivered by your neighbor — a parttime, door-to-door salesperson.

Amway has more than 200,000 such distributors. They sold more than $230 million worth of soap, vitamins and other products during 1974. In 1959, when the company was founded, its sales were $500,000.

The Saginaw rally was one of the 75 or so DeVos or Van Andel stage each year. This was the meeting for all of Michigan and folks came from all over the state.

Through the rally, DeVos hoped to gain more distributors. More distributors mean moe Amway soap sales. A show of hands said about 25 per cent of those at the rally were first timers — either new Amwayers or maybes.

"Some of your friends may think you're silly going around selling soap at night," DeVos said.

His pitch was not that Amway was wonderful or that his system of direct-selling worked.

Rather, he told the audience to do something for themselves.

"Some of you may have been brought up in the atmosphere of defeatism, that conditions rule you. God gave us he ability to do something. We are not slaves to that system.

"If there is anything this organization represents, it's that we bring hope to people and help them fulfill dreams."

Those envious of DeVos' success, or even those just a little skeptical, have dismissed him as a quack.

But if Amway is his style, it's also his livelihood. It has made him a millionaire.
